■ Retailer Math 101 for Specialty Leasing

The right leasing deal must fit within the retailer's financial picture including cost of goods, margins, and operating expenses. Learn about the analytics store owners and managers use to evaluate inventory purchasing plans, analyze sales figures, add on markup, and apply markdown pricing to plan stocks.

11:00 am – 12:30 pm | Westgate Hotel

■ Win-Win: Co-Tenancy Provisions for Tenants and Landlords

Tenants enter into a lease in expectation of the drawing power of the shopping center. This includes not only the traffic generated by the anchor tenants, but also the synergy of the other satellite stores. In the event an anchor tenant leaves a center or a percentage of the stores are not operating, tenants are protecting themselves by implementing co-tenancy provisions into their agreements. These provisions, in most cases, have adverse effects on the landlord's bottom line and include such remedies as reduced rent and/or a delayed store opening. This course will discuss how landlords and tenants can negotiate a co-tenancy provision that may help mitigate an unexpected reduction in foot traffic for both parties.

transit oriented projects (i.e., large mixed-use projects, residential towers, pedestrian-oriented developments, large-scale office developments, casinos, airports, and train stations). Merchandise mix, “target” anchors, co-tenancy, proposed tenant configurations and design, leasing incentives, and transaction structures will be discussed. Developers and leasing professionals have to change the traditional retail leasing paradigm to create vibrant, successful retail within these rapidly evolving project types, usually without the benefit of experience or a “case study” of like/kind projects. Whether strategizing to trump existing traditional concepts or fueling customer engagement to spark habit-forming patterns and relevancy, these successful examples show creativity and excitement. Glean inspiration and understand the latest retail trends propelling new concepts. Develop fresh insights as to how global “consumer influencers” and “customer shopping behavior” are shaping the industry—from store formats, to service expectations, and curated collections.

Leasing Outside the Gateway Markets

This session will examine the keys to leasing in second and third tier markets. As our industry continues to evolve, demand remains steady, retailers continue a surgical approach to expansion, and projects both new and existing vie for that restaurant or retailer that will increase foot traffic and create a groundswell of interest that can turn the tide of merchandising and profitability. While this philosophy is certainly true in first tier markets, there often is considerable consumer demand that is underserved in many second and third tier markets in the U.S. and around the world. By coming to this session, you will learn from some of the world's top shopping center owners and hear the leasing strategies they used to stand apart (or to get a leg up) in attracting coveted retailers to their second and third tier market projects.
