

Law360 Survey: Most Admired Product Liability Attys

Law360 (May 25, 2010, 1:19 PM EDT) -- Law360 is looking for the product liability attorneys most admired by their peers, and we need your help.

Law360 will run a series of articles this summer on America's most admired product liability attorneys, and we are inviting attorneys to submit their nominations between now and June 11.

Survey participants will receive a complete list of the survey results in August.

Is there an attorney you've argued against in court who you respect — or whose briefs you fear? What about a lawyer whose views on the latest hot-button issues you eagerly seek out? Or a former classmate who is practicing the law in novel ways?

To nominate an attorney, click here. The deadline to complete the survey is Friday, June 11, at 5 p.m. ET.

Nominees must be outside your own firm, and only other attorneys may submit nominations. Only nominees who practice within the United States will be considered. Please note that all the information you submit, except for contact information, will be shared with all survey participants.

Nominations are ONLY accepted through the above link. Do not e-mail text documents, PDFs or any other materials to Law360. Submissions in any other format will not be considered.

After all nominations have been received, Law360 editors will cull through the submissions and select winners. A series profiling the winners will begin running on Law360.com and in our newsletters in mid-July.

Thank you in advance for your participation.