GLOBAL PERSPECTIVES IN LEGAL PRACTICE

2026 INTERNATIONAL CLIENT SEMINAR

MARCH 5-7, 2026

PARK HYATT AVIARA RESORT, GOLF CLUB & SPA
CARLSBAD, CALIFORNIA

In an increasingly interconnected global economy, legal practitioners face unprecedented challenges that transcend traditional borders and jurisdictions. This conference brings together leading attorneys, in-house counsel, academics and legal innovators from around the world to explore how globalization is reshaping the practice of law. Through dynamic plenary presentations, engaging breakout sessions and interactive roundtables, attendees will examine critical issues including cross-border transactions, international regulatory compliance, data privacy frameworks across multiple jurisdictions and the evolving landscape of dispute resolution in a multipolar world. Whether navigating the complexities of multinational mergers, addressing emerging cybersecurity threats that span continents, or understanding how different legal systems approach fundamental questions of corporate governance, today's legal professionals must think globally while acting locally.

The 2026 International Client Seminar features practitioners who can share real-world insights into managing diverse client needs across cultural and legal boundaries. Sessions will cover timely topics such as the impact of tariffs on international business, litigation in the age of AI and the growing importance of understanding foreign legal systems in domestic practice. Attendees will have opportunities to engage with experts on payment fraud, e-discovery and discuss privacy and compliance considerations unique to international legal work.

Beyond the programming, this year's ICS offers invaluable networking opportunities to build relationships with colleagues whose practices span six continents. The "Small World" theme reflects both the shrinking distances between legal markets and the intimate professional community that has developed among internationally-minded attorneys. Attendees will leave equipped with practical strategies for expanding their global competencies, new perspectives on solving complex transnational legal problems and a robust network of international contacts who can serve as resources for years to come.

8:15 a.m. – 9:05 a.m. GENERAL SESSION:

Embracing the Awe of Mystery to Become a Better Lawyer

“The most beautiful thing we can experience is the mysterious. It is the source of all true art and science. He to whom the emotion is a stranger, who can no longer pause to wonder and stand wrapped in awe, is as good as dead —his eyes are closed.” Albert Einstein.

Embracing the awe of mystery involves cultivating a sense of wonder, humility and interconnectedness that fosters a deeper appreciation for life and encourages learning and cooperation. In this presentation, we will open up the proverbial Big Book of Wonder and look at many of the real life mysteries that are all around us, including the Golden Ratio, the Fermi Paradox, animal migration, Life After Death, genetic encoding and dozens of other wonders. Inspired by Carl Sagan, David Attenborough and even Bill Nye the Science Guy, we hope to wow our audience with things that they have never seen before, with a goal toward demonstrating how “awe” and “outside the box” thinking can be used to appreciate how attorneys all over the globe have successfully transformed their companies, their firms and their practices. We will learn to embrace the mystery of the unknown, of doing things in different ways and see that by embracing uncertainty and overcoming fear, only then will we see the potential for growth.

• BREAKOUT 1 • Cross-border Contracts—Getting dispute resolution clauses right

For many of us, cross-border transactions are an everyday part of business. While no one wants a deal to go wrong, as inhouse counsel and outside counsel, we need to ensure contracts contain provisions that effectively address resolution of disputes that may arise. It is a major mistake to think of these provisions as “boiler plate”. Dispute resolution provisions need to be carefully considered in the context of a particular transaction, the parties to that transaction and the jurisdictions in which they are operating. Clear drafting and appropriate terms can mean the difference between effective resolution of disputes and major, expensive and time wasting fights.

This session will address key issues to consider in choosing effective dispute resolution processes and the drafting of appropriate contractual terms.

• BREAKOUT 2 • Litigation Cost Control: Identifying and Managing the Hidden (and not so Hidden) Internal Costs of Litigation

Litigation often means outside counsel – which means legal bills. However, legal bills are not the only costs of litigation to an organization. Litigation can cost much more than what legal bills reflect. There is the cost of time and loss of talent when employees are pulled away from their regular duties to gather documents or prepare for depositions, the cost of the internal rumor mill, and many other often overlooked “costs.” During this session we will identify some of those hidden, and perhaps not so hidden but often overlooked, costs and more importantly, discuss how to limit those costs. In-house counsel will walk away from this session with ideas to limit internal disruptions and control the hidden costs before they spiral out of control – while still providing outside counsel what they need to defend your company. Outside counsel will leave with a new appreciation of the challenges faced by in-house counsel and a blueprint to be a true partner with your client.

• BREAKOUT 3 • The Law, Translated and Simplified—How to Make Yourself Understood in the Legal Practice with Foreign Clients

The constant internationalization of relations between private parties that we live in today brings a clear challenge for lawyers: legal practice requires knowledge beyond our localities or countries. This reality requires lawyers to be able not only to assist their international clients with their legal needs in their country, but also to make the law and legal language understood by people who do not share this knowledge, and who come from different legal and social traditions. In this panel, we will discuss tips, stories, and practical aids to support lawyers with foreign clients in their task of making themselves understood, simply and effectively.

• BREAKOUT 4 • Navigating Tariffs - Legal Strategies for a Shifting Global Trade Landscape

2025 was a year of significant shifts in the global trade landscape, chiefly influenced by the effects of global tariffs implemented by the Trump administration in the United States, as well as reciprocal tariffs implemented by countries impacted by the U.S. tariffs. The effects of these tariffs on corporations involved in global trade are multi-faceted. Tariffs lead to increased and unforeseen costs, a detrimental effect on profit margins, and increased exposure to risk and the potential for legal action if tariff-related risks are not handled properly. This panel will provide an update on the pivotal cases Learning Resources v. Trump and Trump v. V.O.S. Selection, both of which are anticipated to be ruled upon by the U.S. Supreme Court as of the seminar, as well as review how business have been navigating the tariffs of 2025 and may strategically look to mitigate the effects of tariffs in the future.

• ROUNDTABLE 1 • Small World, Big Schemes—Navigating the Global Landscape of Payment Fraud

The increasing ease and use of electronic payments and payments induced by electronic communications such as email provide opportunities for fraudsters and scammers to exploit these technologies. When fraud strikes, recovery against the fraudster (often overseas) can prove elusive, leaving a payor, a payee, and their respective financial institutions with the difficult predicament of sorting out who will bear the loss. Whether or not a victim of fraud can be made whole after payment fraud will depend on the payment method as well as the fraud type.

• ROUNDTABLE 3 • Cross-border Contracts—Enforcing and Collecting on Contractual Promises

In follow-up to the Getting The Dispute Clause Right panel, this roundtable addresses real-world issues and challenges when enforcing even the most well-considered dispute resolution provision. The best written contract remains merely a set of promises the law lets you sue to enforce. And it is the judge, arbitrator(s), or jurors who ultimately decide the meaning of each contractual provision, not the parties. These practical realities are doubly present when the venue is outside your company’s typical experience, or when a judgment must be enforced in a separate venue (or multiple venues). Enforcement in an unanticipated venue inevitably faces nuances, such as “magic language” of finality, among other issues such as local bias, collateral challenges based on local law, or apathy toward enforcement. Careful drafting can avoid many issues, but in cross-border transactions your company must understand and be ready to persevere through each venue’s idiosyncrasies.

When it comes to risks and potential exposures to our businesses, none of us like to be the last to know. The same is true for insurance companies who insure those risks and exposures and that is why insurance policies require timely notice of occurrences, accidents, claims and lawsuits. Artificial intelligence has long been a subject of science fiction books, movies and television, and now it has become a reality that is causing much excitement, but also much debate and concern. While AI may provide some advantages and cost-savings, it also has the potential to cause problems if certain controls are not in place. This panel will explore some of the ramifications and dangers that the use of AI presents, such as privacy, security and ethical concerns, as well as job displacement, discrimination and other employment issues. Please join us for an interactive and engaging discussion as we address the benefits and pitfalls of artificial intelligence.

• BREAKOUT 1 • Riding the ESG Wave—Navigating Climate Reporting and Decarbonisation Across the Borders

Companies are required to disclose ESG performance or are under pressure to make ESG disclosures. However, a significant challenge for companies presents, with a fragmented compliance landscape and varying ESG requirements across jurisdictions. As a result, there is often inconsistent output, increased reporting burdens and stakeholder uncertainty. Compounding this challenge is the complexity of global supply chains, with ESG performance no longer limited to direct operations, from Scope 3 emissions, human rights due diligence and responsible sourcing. This session will focus on how companies can streamline their approach to climate reporting across multiple jurisdictions and actionable strategies for aligning processes.

• BREAKOUT 2 • Walt Was Right! It Really is a Small World After All

It is a tale as old as time, each generation scratches its head in wonder at those ahead and those behind. Humanity has evolved in countless ways—technologically, socially, and culturally. Yet beneath these changes lies a powerful continuity: the enduring human principles that connect one generation to the next. This session will challenge the assumptions, expectations, perceptions/misconceptions of others, and explore how core values such as empathy, justice, cooperation, respect, and the pursuit of meaning have transcended time, culture, and circumstance. We invite legal professionals at all levels to reflect on how these timeless principles inform daily practice, shape workplace culture, and sustain the credibility and purpose of the legal profession. It's an opportunity to align tradition with transformation—and to strengthen the values that make the legal workplace more than just a place to work, but a place to lead. Participants will walk away with a renewed understanding of how deeply rooted human principles can be a unifying force—helping individuals and organizations align across age, background, and role to create a stronger, more values-driven workplace.

As legal practice becomes increasingly global, attorneys routinely find themselves needing to depose witnesses or defend clients across international borders. This session addresses the practical challenges attorneys face when depositions must be conducted in foreign jurisdictions, from navigating complex legal frameworks where certain countries prohibit their citizens from giving depositions on home soil, to mastering cultural competency across different business contexts. The presentation will explore alternative venue options, and coordination with clients and all opposing counsel. A significant focus will be placed on cultural competency as a critical component of successful international practice, covering everything from email communication styles and formality expectations to deposition preparation and conduct across different cultural contexts.

The session will provide practical strategies for building trust and maintaining effective representation across international borders and cultural divides.
