RISE TO THE TOP

Discovering Effective Pathways and Fostering Teamwork to Obtain Successful Results

2026 PRODUCT LIABILITY & COMPLEX TORTS PRACTICE GROUP SEMINAR
SEPTEMBER 16-18, 2026 | STEIN ERIKSEN LODGE | PARK CITY, UTAH

Success does not always manifest in traditional forms. Simply earning a place among Olympic competitors or receiving a nomination at the Sundance Film Festival is an extraordinary achievement in its own right. The same principle holds true in litigation: you do not have to go the distance and obtain a defense verdict to accomplish a meaningful victory. Defining what success looks like — and assembling the right strategy and team to pursue it — begins long before the first motion is filed.

Our 2026 seminar offers a comprehensive program designed to equip you and your organization for successful outcomes across today's most challenging legal environments. Sessions will address the evolving generational dynamics shaping modern jury pools, novel and effective resolution strategies that drive cost savings from the moment an adverse event occurs, proactive risk management against emerging plaintiff's bar tactics, the strategic use of vendors in evidence presentation and damages disputes, and navigating compliance in a shifting political landscape — examined from multiple perspectives and increasingly indispensable to modern practice. And, of course, no forward-looking legal seminar would be complete without a thorough examination of artificial intelligence — its growing role in litigation, its implications for practice management, and the ethical and strategic considerations that make it not merely relevant, but essential.

Victory in any arena is built on experience, preparation, and teamwork. Those who have stood atop Olympic podiums or accepted awards in Park City rarely did so alone. Litigation is no different. We look forward to welcoming you to the beautiful Wasatch Mountains for three days of substantive programming, collaboration, and camaraderie.

GENERAL SESSION

Spotlight Shifts—Turning Generational Differences into a Grand Jury Prize Ensemble

Ever feel like your team is working on the same film but reading different scripts? Boomers are directing with classic 35mm, Gen X is holding the storyboards and keeping continuity tight, Millennials are pushing for digital IMAX, and Gen Z is already livestreaming the behind the scenes documentary. You're not alone.

In this lively, interactive session, we'll explore how each generation brings its own cinematic style, communication preferences, values, and work rhythms to today's multi generational law practice. From the courtroom to the conference room, learn how to turn generational contrasts into a compelling ensemble performance that sharpens trial strategy, boosts collaboration, and strengthens your cast dynamic. By the end, you'll be ready to call "Action!" with confidence as you produce your most seamless cross generational blockbuster yet.

FAULT LINES & FRAMEWORKS—A COMPARATIVE ANALYSIS OF GLOBAL PRODUCT LIABILITY REGIMES

How does a single defective product trigger radically different legal consequences across jurisdictions? This panel brings together practitioners from Quebec (Canada), Austria and Louisiana, alongside a Canadian manufacturing CEO and a forensic accountant, to examine how civil law and common law systems allocate risk, quantify damages and structure recourses in product liability disputes. Through practical examples, the discussion will highlight key divergences in strict liability, contractual risk allocation and evidentiary burdens. Attendees will gain concrete insight into how these differences shape litigation strategy, insurance positioning and business decision-making in an increasingly globalized market.

TRACK 1:

FROM TANGIBLE GOODS TO DIGITAL CODE: THE EXPANDING SCOPE OF PRODUCT LIABILITY

In many jurisdictions, product liability law has traditionally been limited to tangible goods. That boundary is now being tested. In a recent appellate decision, a court allowed a wrongful death claim to proceed against a rideshare company, concluding that a mobile application could qualify as a “product” for purposes of product liability law.

This session examines how courts across the country are rethinking what constitutes a product in an increasingly digital economy. We will explore emerging trends, highlight key decisions from multiple jurisdictions, and discuss the implications for companies whose offerings blend software, services, and traditional products.

Join us for a forward-looking discussion on how to evaluate risk, advise clients, and develop effective defense strategies as product liability law continues to expand beyond physical goods.

THE DUTY TO PRESERVE AND PROTECT IN AN AGE OF EXPLODING AMOUNTS OF DATA

As sources of data within businesses continue to explode, the need for attorneys and their clients to understand best practices around how to identify, preserve, collect, and analyze relevant information is certainly heightened. Coupled with many states’ ethical duty of technical competence, enterprising litigants often engage in a tactic of practicing “discovery on discovery,” in an effort to craft spoliation claims that can lead to hefty settlements or verdicts. Join us as we walk through best practices for: scoping and tracking legal holds; identifying and defensibly preserving potentially relevant information; and how to leverage digital forensics not just to collect the data but also to uncover the details if things go wrong.

Product Enhancements in the Age of Nuclear Verdicts

Outside of the litigation context, product enhancements are almost universally considered beneficial. They may provide improved features or safety for customers, may allow consumers to purchase less expensive models, and can help to differentiate a manufacturer's products from competitor products. But product enhancements can also provide talking points - or worse - for plaintiff lawyers, who often argue that manufacturers should have implemented enhancements more quickly, universally, or both. This panel will explore techniques for addressing products that are not equipped with an enhancement and products on which an enhancement was optional. Panelists will discuss discovery and trial strategies that mitigate typical arguments from plaintiffs about product enhancement timing or implementation across a product line.

Defective by Design, Is AI a Product or Service?

Product liability claims involving AI may arise when sellers, manufacturers, or other persons place a product that is somehow defective into the distribution chain. How are the traditional theories of liability such as manufacturing defects, design defects, and failure to warn being applied to AI. Is AI a product or a service? This session will address how the "stream of commerce" analysis becomes considerably more complex with AI, the product-service classification of AI and emerging trends, and how companies can limit their exposure with the integration of AI.
